erexicil is suggested to be able to augment the production of endogenous testosterone, as well as reducing the body's supply of bound and inactive testosterone, which are converted into estrogen.