when the aorta is too narrow, as is the case in babies born with coarctation of the aorta, the heart may have difficulty providing the rest of the body with the oxygen it needs to function.